

International conference about risk management for innovation SRA Nordic 2019

In November 2019, the Technical University of Denmark, in cooperation with IDA Risk, is organising the fifth conference for the Nordic Chapter of the Society for Risk Analysis with the theme: Risk management for innovation. The conference language is English and it will provide a representative overview of practice and research in risk management in the Nordic and Baltic countries.

SRA Nordic conferences are held every year, alternating between the Nordic countries, and this year, Denmark will host it for the first time. Established in 2015, SRA Nordic gathers risk analysis experts from the Nordic and Baltic countries (Denmark (incl. Greenland), the Faroe Islands, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia).

The themes invited for the conference are broad and relate to risk assessment, risk characterisation, risk communication, risk management and risk policies. Focus is on risks that are of interest to individuals, to public and private organisations as well as to society on a local, regional and national level. The conference theme especially encourages presentations highlighting risks of new technology, interaction between social actors and innovators, the public perception and acceptance as well as stakeholder involvement.

The main event at day 1 of the conference, 6 November, is a Risk Forum – a special event boasting a broad range of representatives from companies, authorities and universities. It is limited to 50 participants. Days 2 and 3, 7-8 November, will be organised as plenary sessions and as parallel sessions with oral presentations. A dialogue session on risk and responsible innovation forms part of the programme as does a poster session for students. Four high-profile invited speakers will give presentations on the conference theme.

The conference will contribute to maintaining and expanding the Nordic and international network of professionals in industry, governments, universities, research institutes as well as consulting companies that work in the field of risk management of innovative products, technologies and services.
